Anticipation ends with team's arrival: the new ...

The long-anticipated Inspector General team, composed of about 100 evaluators and 40 observers, began their in-depth inspection of Goodfellow bright and early Monday morning.

Though the IG's presence can often inspire nervousness and excitement on the part of those being inspected, it certainly isn't designed to be that way, said Col. Jay Seward, chief of inspections for the team.

"People shouldn't see us as bad guys wearing black hats," Seward said. "Our charter states that our purpose is to instruct as well as evaluate."

Accordingly, I expect my evaluators to provide useful feedback and recommendations to the units they assess."

Seward, whose past experiences as both a pilot and support group commander have seasoned him for his position as an IG team leader, feels the overall processes and tactics of the IG are evolving in a positive and challenging way. To embody this evolution, Seward coined the phrase "E2I," which stands for evaluate, empathize and instruct.

"Back in my SAC (Strategic Air Command) days, an inspection was an inspection. Its sole purpose was strictly to evaluate," the colonel said. "Today, however, the IG is becoming a mentoring organization. As such, we like to focus more on education. Education not only in terms of what the IG can teach, but what new thoughts and ideas about mission accomplishment we can learn by watching other people at work. This way, it's a learning experience for both sides."

In this respect, one of the most crucial qualities an evaluator must continually strive to improve is the ability to remain objective, Seward said.

"I'm careful not to be biased; and I want that sense of caution to filter down to my inspectors," Seward said. "We sincerely want to recognize the 'best practice' in a given workplace, even though that particular way of doing business might not fit into a certain inspector's pre-conceived notion. We do our best to look at all angles of a process, and before an evaluator renders a final decision, he or she needs to convince their boss it's a fact."

LONDON — The United States will remain engaged in world affairs, and talk to the contrary is disturbing, dangerous and wrong, U.S. Defense Secretary William Cohen said in London Nov. 18.

Unrestricted use of SSN poses threat to privacy

When Social Security Numbers were first issued in 1936, the federal government assured people that use of the numbers would be limited to social security programs.

Today, however, the SSN has become a national identification number, resulting in a major threat to the privacy of Americans everywhere, according to Special Agent Michael Chesbro, senior counterintelligence agent at Fort Lewis, Wash.,

and author of the book "Privacy For Sale."

"The government has done a lot of things to protect people's rights and privacy," said Steven Chenault, manager of the base's privacy act program. "Though a lot of it is up to the individual, people have to protect themselves."

In 1974, the government recognized this threat to people's rights and freedoms, and attempted to correct the problem by passing Public Law 93-579, also known as the Privacy Act of 1974.

Section 7 of the privacy act states, "It shall be

Military training leaders are Goodfellow's ... Unsung heroes

COMMANDER'S COLUMN

BY LT. COL. DAVID GUADALUPE
312th Training Squadron commander

It's the call every commander dreads.

On a typical sunny afternoon last March, I received word a 312th student had attempted to end his life in his dormitory room. As I raced toward the dorm, a hundred questions crossed my mind. Who was he? What prompted his actions? Where was he from? Did anyone suspect he was having problems?

Upon my arrival, the scene I witnessed was right out of an episode of The Learning Channel's Trauma. Paramedics were working feverishly to control the bleeding and stabilize the young man. Information was sketchy at best, but there was one certainty: the student's life would have surely ended that afternoon if not for the efforts of a 312th military training leader – Staff Sgt. Brian Clements.

In a fortunate twist of fate, Clements entered the victim's room while attempting to locate another student. Instead, he found the victim lying in a pool of blood. Clement's training as a firefighter immediately kicked in. He calmly sent someone to call 911 and administered first aid until a rescue unit arrived.

Fortunately, this isn't a typical day for a MTL. However, it does highlight the delicate tightrope they must walk each day. Officially, MTLs are responsible for providing "military training" to non-prior service students. This includes, above all, instilling Air Force Core Values by enforcing dress and appearance standards, administering the physical conditioning program and inspecting rooms, to name a few tasks. What most don't realize is that MTLs also play a key role as advisors, mentors and counselors to young men and women from all walks of life.

Despite the time constraints that leading a flight of more than 70 students creates, there's normally no other person they'll get to know and respect more than their MTL. That's because, unlike most of us who go home to our families every evening and weekend, MTLs are on call for their airmen 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. When the call comes, it's normally not an issue that can be resolved over the phone. The problems are normally very personal, complex, time consuming and above all, a potential stumbling block in the student's success at Goodfellow and our ability to Question: I'd like to know who the security forces' customers are. If they're here to serve and protect the military, why do they inconvenience military members? First, why do they take your identification card out of your hands at the gate without permission? Secondly, why do they do drug detection walks around billeting without cause and without the required consent from the resident?

Response: Security forces are assigned to the base to serve and protect military and civilian people and property. When someone hands an ID card to a security forces member, it's generally understood the card is being offered for a visual inspection of authenticity. The only way to make this kind of assessment is to do

Prevention: Key to MEO business

BY TECH. SGT. VONDA MONROE
NCO in charge of MEO

In the medical world, prevention means keeping in shape, eating well, using moderation when consuming alcoholic beverages or taking smoking cessation classes.

In the vehicle maintenance world, prevention means getting regular oil and filter changes, rotating tires or getting scheduled tune-ups.

The Military Equal Opportunity world isn't any different.

Prevention in the MEO world means treating all people with the respect and kindness they deserve regardless of race, color, sex, national origin or religion. Contrary to the old perception of "Social Actions," MEO's previous office name, we don't enjoy substantiating cases of unlawful discrimination and sexual harassment. We prefer to see this type of behavior to completely disappear and have people judge others by the content of their character versus the color of their skin.

So, how can we at Goodfellow prevent unlawful discrimination?

The first way to prevent discrimination is for base leadership to drive home the Department of Defense policy to let everyone know it won't be tolerated and anyone found in violation of the Equal Opportunity and Treatment Policy will be dealt with swiftly and severely. The actions of Gen. Lloyd Newton, Air Education and Training Command commander, and emphasis letters by Col. Toreaser Steele, 17th Training Wing commander, and the group commanders have clearly illustrated "zero tolerance" isn't just a catchy phrase, but a way of life at Goodfellow and in the command.

Support from all commanders, first sergeants and supervisors may also prevent discrimination. They must stress to members the need to conduct themselves in a professional manner and inform members of behavior that could be considered inappropriate or offensive to others. Supervisors are responsible for the climate their subordinates are exposed to in the workplace. They must know and understand their diverse workforce, set the standard, be a role model and ensure people are doing the right thing. Supervisors must also make it clear

Four soldiers from Goodfellow Army detachment prove that ... All you need is heart

BY CAPT. JEAN CHAUSSE

Bravo Company commander from 344th MI Bn

Hearth. It's not a value in any of the United States military services. It can't be touched, measured, taught or bought. However, it's an indispensable character trait, without which survival would be impossible.

On Oct. 13, I had the pleasure of watching the Iron Soldier Competition – a monthly event in which the 344th Military Intelligence Battalion's most physically fit trainees put their strength, stamina and endurance to the test.

The competition is composed of three events: push-ups, sit-ups and a two-mile run. Each has a two-minute time limit and is worth 100 points. If soldiers score less than 100 in any event, they're disqualified from the event, but may continue the test.

This month, there were 21 competitors. I'd like to share a few of their stories with you.

Pfc. Robert Steele

After knocking out 111 push-ups and 86 sit-ups, Steele participated in a two-mile run which tied him for first place. The next day was the grueling obstacle course, an opportunity our trainees engage in once a month. Steele did his best to hurdle four-foot horizontal logs. Although he ran out of strength, he refused to give up. Two days later, he ran in the 10-kilometer Armadillo run at Lake Nasworthy, and was one of the first competitors to cross the finish line. Why? He had heart.

Spec. Roanna Wexler

Not everyone competing was certain they could score the full 300 points just to make their score competitive. Wexler was in this situation. She didn't complete the run in a time to score 100 points. However, she did accomplish 74 push-ups and 99 sit-ups. Drained from the tremendous energy expenditure, she pushed herself forward to score 88 points in the run event. Though she knew she wasn't going to score the full 100 points on the run, Wexler never failed to give 110% for all eight laps. Why? She also had heart.

Wexler

Spec. Donna Powers

Powers' story began the week-end before the Iron Soldier Competition. First, she flew to Lake Tahoe, Nev., where she competed in a full marathon, several thousand feet above sea level. A few days later, she also participated in the 10-kilometer Armadillo race. However, the most significant thing about Powers is not what she achieved for herself, but what she's done for others. Much of her time is spent pushing and motivating other trainees to achieve their goals. Though Powers was not a competitor in the Iron Soldier event, the hard work and dedication she put forth in other pursuits proves she has heart.

Pfc. Robyn Sypolt

Sypolt arrived at Goodfellow a few pounds overweight. Over a period of a few months, she lost 10 pounds, was taken off the weight control program and dropped her two-mile run time from 21:21 to 17:39. Her progress represents a tremendous improvement over such a short period of time. She has now developed positive habits that can help her continue this trend for the rest of her life. Perhaps in a few years she'll return as an NCO and administer the Iron Soldier Competition for the next generation of soldiers.

Sypolt

In closing, I salute all of these soldiers; each and every day they reaffirm my faith in the human spirit. I would be at fault not to recognize the efforts of the outstanding NCOs in this battalion, as well. They tirelessly foster a warrior spirit and the desire to win. Most important, they go to great lengths to draw the absolute best out of each and every soldier.

Whatever level of physical fitness you're in, I hope the next time you're exercising, you remember the inspiring examples set by these soldiers, and push yourself to the next level.

All you need is heart.

meet the 17th Training Wing's primary objective – to produce mission-ready warriors.

For example, in a span of just a few hours, an MTL could field 20 phone calls, e-mails and visits from instructors, 17th Security Forces, squadron members, the legal office and an unhappy squadron commander for any number of reasons. We then expect them to locate the airmen, investigate the matter and take some decisive action – a reprimand, expansion of study hours or an appointment with the chaplain. The only parallel I can equate this job to is a parent, teacher and first sergeant all wrapped up in one!

Unfortunately, in the year-and-a-half I've been at Goodfellow, I've sensed that many "permanent party" members wrongfully believe military training is exclusively an MTL responsibility. This notion couldn't be further from the truth. Military training never ceases, on or off base, whether we acknowledge it or not, and all of us who wear a uniform are the instructors. Illustrations of this point are plentiful.

Last year we had a student who was terrific at technical training. He excelled at every test and volunteered in class to lead the group. Unfortunately, he disliked the less exciting aspects of airmen-ship, such as cleaning his room, showing respect for MTLs and generally complying with directions. His instructors made matters worse by not rebuking him and reinforcing the importance of being an airmen first. Needless to say, he's no longer in the Air Force.

Dedicated MTLs, like Clements, will continue to carry the greatest burden in the battle to keep our young mentally, spiritually and physically fit. To reduce the risk of underage drinking, phase violations and boredom, they're taking time away from their own families to organize trips to hockey games, concerts and other off-base events. Our MTLs have also stepped up their presence in the dorms, expanding work hours and establishing evening shifts. It's made a significant impact on the morale of the troops as can be witnessed by 312th low attrition rates, dramatic reduction in underage drinking and 93 percent field satisfaction rates with our graduates.

However, MTLs can't do it alone. Every airman, NCO, officer and civilian at Goodfellow has a personal obligation to step up to the plate and lead by example. The saying "Do as I say not as I do" doesn't cut it with today's students. They're bright, have a strong sense of fairness and will reflect the attitudes we demonstrate to them today.

to their people that they have the right to file a complaint free from reprisal, take action when aware of any violations to the EOT policy and ensure every new arrival to an organization gets mandatory human relations education within 30 days.

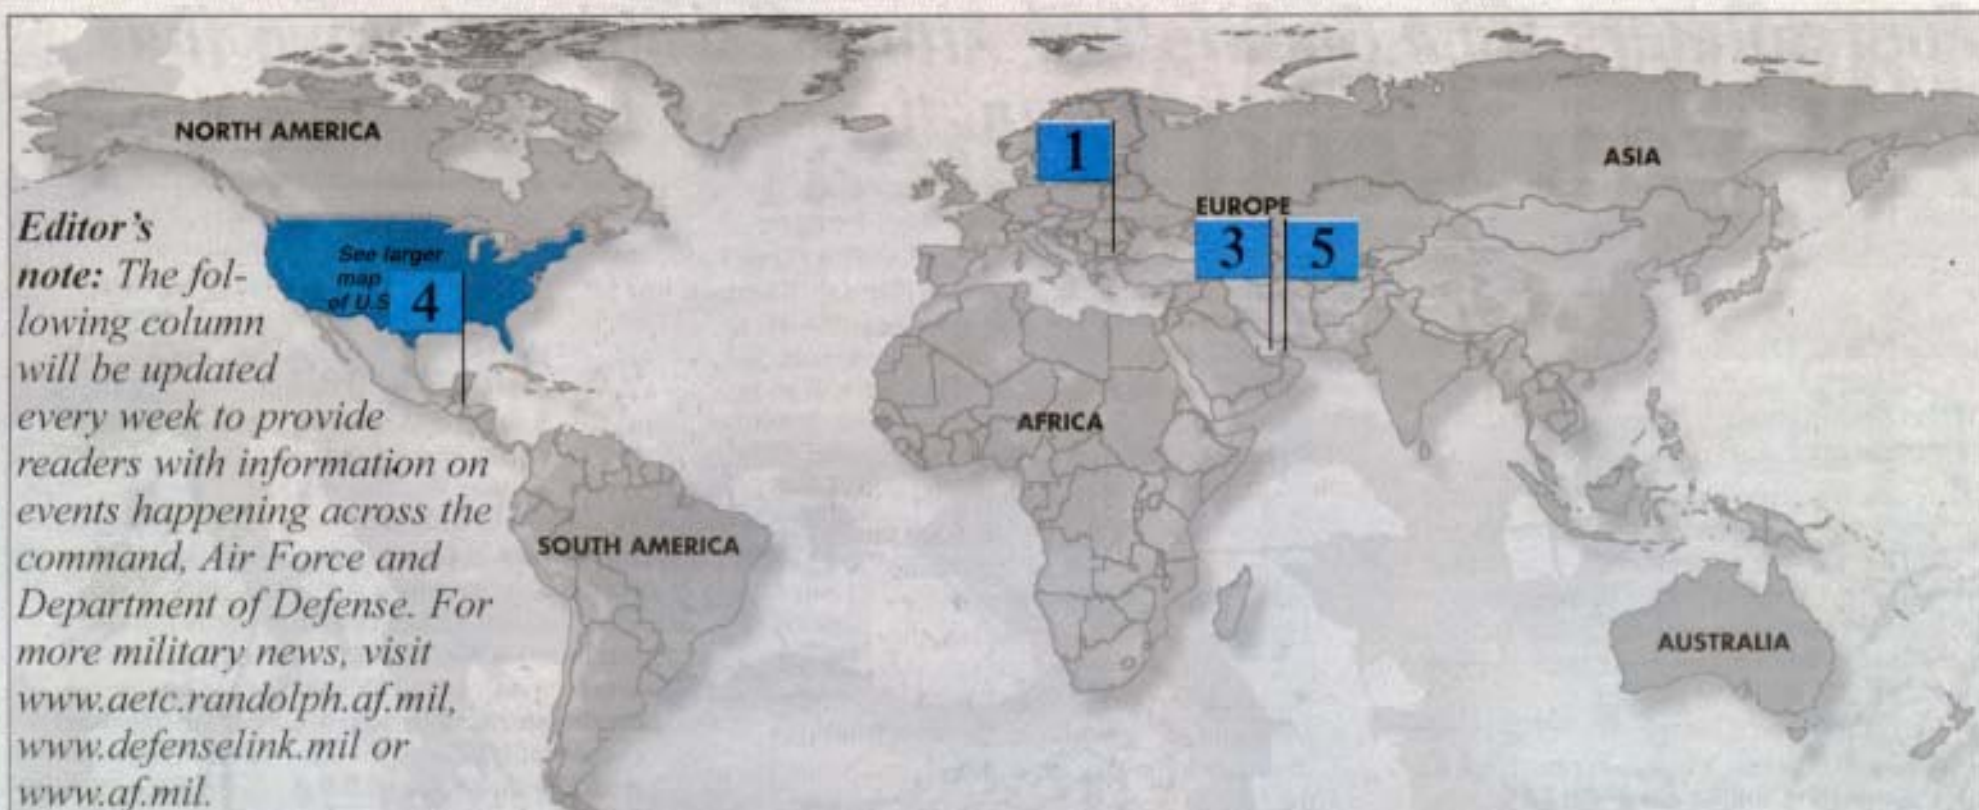

HRE is another great prevention tool in the DOD toolbox. In these classes, we remind people of EOT policies, professional behaviors to practice, types and examples of unprofessional conduct to avoid and ways to eliminate unlawful discrimination. Participants in these classes must attend with open ears and minds.

The wing commander has challenged every individual at Goodfellow to correct or question unprofessional behavior and unlawful discrimination on the spot. Everyone on this installation must comply with Air Force policy and examine their own behaviors. People should avoid jokes or gags that involve race, sex, color, national origin or religion.

As Benjamin Franklin once said, "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." Let's ensure we, members of Team Goodfellow, have tons of "cures" throughout the installation.

a hands-on check. To speed up entry onto the base, hands-on checks aren't always accomplished, however, they may be done at any time a gate guard feels it's necessary. To answer your second question, military working dog teams frequently conduct foot patrols for a variety of reasons. One of those reasons is to deter criminal and terrorist activity. Although Goodfellow has narcotics and explosive-detection MWDs, they're also valued for their additional police patrol capabilities. And though an occupant's consent or command search authority is required to search inside someone's quarters, MWDs are regularly directed to patrol building exteriors and common areas to ensure a safe environment for every member of Team Goodfellow.

BUCHAREST, Romania — Eight Marine NCOs from Quantico, Virg., and Camp Pendleton, Calif., are "training-the-trainers" at the Romanian NCO school near the city of Pitesti. The Marines are slated to remain in Romania for two years.

The program is an outgrowth of a 1998 visit by Romania's president and defense minister to the Marine Corps base at Quantico. Impressed by the professionalism of the American NCOs, Romanian Defense Minister Victor Babiuc asked the Department of Defense to help his military develop a professional NCO corps, one that would be interoperable with NATO. ARABIAN GULF — After an intensive 36-hour effort, the Navy called off the search for a Sailor missing after going overboard from the aircraft carrier USS John F. Kennedy in the Arabian Gulf, Nov. 22.

The Sailor, Airman Jeriko Baker, 20, was assigned to Strike Fighter Squadron of Beaufort, S.C. Baker, who had been in the Navy 26 months, was from Dresden, Tenn.

A muster of the crew verified that a shipmate was missing, prompting an immediate search of the area by ships, small boats and helicopters. Joining in the effort were USS Monterey, USS John Young and the French frigate FS Commandant Bouan. The incident is under investigation. (Courtesy of Navy Wire Service)

Playing Santa: Marines, Salvation Army collect donations for Toys for Tots drive

BY AIRMAN 1ST CLASS CLINTON JONES
Public Affairs

During the past eight years, the Marine Corps Detachment on base has helped supply new toys to needy San Angelo children through the Marines' annual Toys for Tots program.

"The whole idea behind Toys for Tots is if we give a child a new toy during Christmas time, it might provide some hope for that child," said Gunnery Sgt. Travis Warner, Toys for Tots coordinator for San Angelo.

The Marines started setting up drop-off spots around the San Angelo area Nov. 22. This year, there are more than 15 different drop-off spots and by the end of the drive, the number of drop-off spots will reach 22.

Anyone who wants to donate may drop off a new, unwrapped toy at the Goodfellow Base Exchange, the Marine Corps Detachment or any of the following locations in San Angelo: K-Mart, H-E-B, Toys R Us, Caldwell Bankers Home Center, the Marine Corps recruiting station in Sunset Mall, every McDonalds, Cellular One on Knickerbocker Road, the Angelo State University Bookstore, Angelo Mini Storage, both Wal-Marts, Aaron's Rental Purchase, Bank of America on Sherwood Way or the Park 2400 Edward Jones Company.

Besides people dropping off toys for children at these places, they'll also be holding special events, Warner said.

The Marines will be holding a barbecue today and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at H-E-B at the intersection of Avenue N and Sherwood Way.

Another event will take place at the Wall Dragway in San Angelo Saturday at 8 a.m. The entrance fee for racers will be $25 plus a toy. The donated toys will then be given to Toys for Tots.

The Marines will also be going to all the elementary schools in San Angelo Dec. 15 and speaking to the children to tell them what the program is all about.

Dec. 17 is the final day of the drive, Warner said. The Marines will then inventory all the toys and turn them over to the Salvation Army. The Salvation Army will then distribute all the toys to the children they have on their list Dec. 21-22.

"I think people should help others who are less fortunate in some way or another during the holidays," said Staff Sgt. Fred Wilson, a Toys for Tots volunteer. "It's worth the time I spend to be able to bring joy and happiness to children's faces."

Air Force Fraud, Waste, Abuse program is still alive

BY AIRMAN 1ST CLASS VINCENT TUFARIELLO
Public Affairs

Members of the 17th Training Wing Inspector General office want to remind base people what the purpose of the Fraud, Waste and Abuse Program is and answer the question, "What happened to that program?"

The FWA program was started to formalize the Air Force's commitment to saving money by reducing the waste of resources and abuse of processes, and it's still alive.

Senior Airman Tina Huber, base IG information manager, noticed some people aren't completely sure of the program's function and how to use it.

Before knowing how the program can be properly used, people need to know the Air Force's definitions of fraud, waste and abuse, Huber said.

◆ Fraud – This is any intentional deception designed to unlawfully deprive the Air Force of something of value.

◆ Waste – This is the extravagant, careless or needless use of Air Force funds or property.

◆ Abuse – This is intentionally wrongful or improper use of Air Force resources. Abuse of authority also falls under this definition.

"We're charged to be stewards of the Air Force dollar and we need a strong program to protect it," said Lt. Col. Larry Kluck, base IG. "But the bottom line is that reducing fraud, waste and abuse is everyone's responsibility."

Commanders and supervisors should make an effort to resolve complaints at the lowest level possible, but may refer complaints to the base IG when it extends beyond their scope or if an investigation is warranted, Huber said.

Complaints may pertain to fraud, waste and abuse issues or be of a personal nature to include equal opportunity treatment violations.

People who want to report a problem to the IG may do it in several ways. They may stop by the IG office in the wing headquarters building, Bldg. 158, call the office at 4-5289, call the FWA Hotline and leave a message at 4-3048 or e-mail Kluck at larry.kluck@goodfellow.af.mil. People who report FWA violations to the IG may remain anonymous.

Col. Rick Perry, chief of the operations and training branch for the AETC Inspector General, repels down the rescue tower at the Louis F. Garland Fire Academy during reverse rappelling training orientation.

Another aspect of inspections the colonel discussed was the importance of thinking on a broad scale. Though there are varying degrees of technical know-how required to effectively accomplish a specific job, Seward maintains there's a common thread that's woven within the fabric of all work places.

"Naturally, we bring our fair share of experts; people who speak the technical language of a specific job and can easily get into the nuts, bolts and intricacies," Seward said. "However, it's also just as important to remember that all organizations are comprised of people, and there are certain constants with regards to human behavior. In this respect, one example might be focusing on how to help organizations better improve their management and leadership practices, independent of the skills needed to actually do the job."

According to Seward, Air Education and Training Command is the first taste of Air Force life for new recruits. Therefore, it's important not only that they receive the highest quality training possible, but they should also feel they're an important part of the Air Force team.

"I'm sort of glad this inspection was happening when I got here," said Airman Daniel Colon, who begins fire training in a couple of weeks. "I just arrived at Goodfellow from basic training and I thought things were going to be a little less stressful, but because of the inspection everyone was very busy showing the inspectors how they do business. But I've been watching and listening, trying to take in as much as possible. I believe this experience will better able me to perform when the time comes for my own inspection."

Despite whatever thoughts or feelings that may exist to the contrary, Seward emphasizes the fact that the IG is the biggest proponent of the base they're inspecting.

"Right now, my team members are Goodfellow's best cheerleaders," Seward said. "This isn't to say we won't take the necessary action to help

When the AETC IG ends, results will be released in the base theater Dec. 10 at 8:30 a.m.

People who may attend will be notified.

A free post-IG party will then be held for everyone at the Louis F. Garland Fire Academy high bay from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

A bus will transport people. Pick-up and drop-off locations are in front of Bldgs. 530, 519, 3201 and 258. The bus will run from 10:45 a.m. to 1:15 p.m.

the base rectify any discrepancies that might be noted; on the contrary, we must and we will. But it's painful when that happens. Though it may not always seem evident, the truth is, the IG is emotionally tied to a positive outcome of every base's inspection."

Long-time base member dies

A long-time member of the Goodfellow community passed away at his home in San Angelo Nov. 26.

Gene Wetherill Jr., known by his friends and coworkers as "Mean Gene," was a quality assurance evaluator at Goodfellow for the past 12 years.

A memorial service was held Monday at 3 p.m. at the base chapel with Chaplain (Capt.) John Hubbs officiating. A gathering of family and friends followed the memorial at the Lone Wolf Pub in San Angelo.

"Mean Gene" was born Feb. 20, 1943 in Newark, N.J. His hometown was Prattville, Ala., but he lived in San Angelo for 18 years. He retired as a senior master sergeant after 20 years of service in the Air Force.

ASU cadets visit Dyess

BY CAPT. TOMAS PENA

ASU ROTC detachment Public Affairs

Angelo State University's Reserve Officer Training Corps cadets visited Dyess Air Force Base Nov. 19, to broaden their Air Force knowledge and experience. The Aerospace Studies Department provided transportation to allow cadets a full day's exposure to aircraft operations.

1st Lt. Kim Monroe, a B-1B bomber co-pilot and 1996 ASU graduate, escorted the nine cadets. She guided them through the highly sophisticated B-1B computer and motion simulator used to train pilots to maximum proficiency before entering the cockpit. The students were allowed the hands-on experience of flying the bomber in the simulated environment, an educational opportunity not commonly available.

Upon completion of the simulator, Monroe escorted cadets to a static, but operational, bomber plane located on the flightline. Cadets sat in the cockpit's pilot, copilot and weapons systems officers' seats while being briefed on the duties of each position, and the performance capability of the aircraft.

The next stop was the Dyess air traffic control tower. Here the cadets learned how to direct aircraft in and out of the Abilene area, and how the Air Force works closely with civilian air traffic controllers. From the tower, cadets looked over the flightline as an Air Force C-130 transport aircraft practiced drop-maneuvers across from the runway.

The cadets found the final part of the visit, a ride on a C-130 aircraft, the most exciting. With the cadets on board, the plane took off for a training mission over San Angelo including a practice runway approach at Mathis Field. During their flight, the aircrew answered questions on daily aircraft operations and the roles of each crew member, including the officer positions of pilot, copilot, and navigator.

Cadets returned to San Angelo later Friday afternoon filled with knowledge that will enhance their future effectiveness as Air Force officers.

"It showed me a new perspective on Air Force operations - definitely worth the trip!" said Cadet Christopher Nunez, a marketing major.

Air Force ROTC continues to provide cadets opportunities to experience the Air Force and aviation. For more information on Air Force ROTC and scholarship opportunities, please contact Capt. Ron Ruppel at (915) 942-2036, or send e-mail to ron.ruppel@angelo.edu.

AETC program offers travel rewards

The Air and Education Training Command has developed a new program to reward AETC's designated drivers.

The AETC Holiday Designated Driver Program is designed to increase safety on the streets during the holidays and recognizes designated drivers across the command for their efforts in preventing drunk driving.

To enter the AETC Holiday Designated Driver Program, designated drivers must be 18 or older and must properly identify themselves as the designated driver for a group when visiting an AETC services facility that serves alcoholic beverages. The customer will then be given an entry form to enter a drawing for a ticket voucher.

The contest runs from now until Jan. 1 and the grand prize will be two tickets from TWA for travel anywhere in the continental United States where TWA has normally scheduled service.

Airman's Manual is now available

The Air Force released the 177-page Airman's Manual to educate Air Force members on fundamental skills needed for deployed environments.

People may get a copy of the manual through their orderly rooms or electronically at afm10-100.randolph.af.mil/airman.

People may also e-mail the Web site's administrator at airmans.manual@randolph.af.mil to provide feedback about needed changes or additions.

Club card interest rate hike is false

The First USA Bank has recently informed Goodfellow Club members that their cards' interest rates are being increased to a minimum of 19.99 percent.

The bank said the mailing was an error and Air Force Services Agency people are working to correct the problem.

If a person's bill reflects an increase in the interest rate, they may take the statement to the accounting office in Bldg. 3311 or to the Goodfellow Club for review.

People have new way to send mail

People who want to send mail to "Any Service Member" overseas must now go through a new process to get it there.

An individual or group must contact the Dislocation Allowance Bosnia Donations Team at (800) 841-0937. Each caller will be asked to leave their name, address, phone number and a description of the contents of the mail. After this information is taken, the team goes through some verification procedures and then notifies the sender to send the package to them. Once the team receives the package, they send it to the appropriate locations.

For more information about the changes to the program, people may e-mail bosnia_donations@hq.dla.mil.

Gov't card is restricted to official use

Bank of America has recently sent letters to government card holders encouraging them to use access checks for bill consolidations and purchases of gifts.

These letters state the checks can be used up to the balance on their accounts and will be charged to the military Visa credit card.

The military Visa credit card is for official use only and people who receive these checks must destroy them.

For more information, call Tech. Sgt. Glenn Mash at 4-3401.

Brain freeze

Caitlann Brown from the Child Development Center's School-age building takes a strong case of brain freeze head-on as she eats some ice cream from the Goodfellow Club Nov. 24. The club offered free ice cream for a day as part of the 17th Services Division's activities in observance of Military Family Appreciation Week.

unlawful for any federal, state or local government agency to deny any individual any right, benefit or privilege provided by law because of such individual's refusal to disclose his social security account number."

The U.S. Congress also recognized the threat from unlimited use of the SSN as a common numerical identifier.

When introducing a section of "The Privacy Protection Act," Congressman Ron Paul of Texas said, "The expanding use of the SSN is a dangerous precedent with serious consequences for Americans everywhere. The number was originally used to administer social security benefits, but abuses of the number have grown and grown, effectively creating a national ID number that exposes innocent Americans to needless risks everyday."

Military people are especially at risk from unauthorized use of their SSNs because they use their numbers more often than the general public, Chenault said.

Some agencies requesting people's SSN often claim they have authority to do so under various laws when no such authority exists.

For example, some agencies requesting a person's SSN may cite Title 10, Sections 3012 and 8012 of the United States Code as an authority to get the number and other personal information. In fact, these laws provide no authority to request a SSN.

Recently, after being advised these sections provide no authority to collect SSNs, some agencies have begun claiming their authority to collect people's SSN and other personal information is found in U.S.C. Title 10, Section 3013 and 8013. However, this isn't true either. These sections define the duties of the Secretaries of the Army and Air Force, and provide no authority for any agency to collect SSNs.

Military regulations also state that use of the SSN isn't authorized for purposes other than establishing personnel, financial and medical records upon entry into the service.

"As 'identity theft' becomes an ever-increasing criminal threat, protecting your SSN from unauthorized disclosure becomes even more important," Chesbro said.

In the 1999 summer issue of the Interagency Operations Security Support Staff's newsletter, "The OPSEC Indicator," Charles Cadden and Mike Kane of the U.S. Secret Service advise, "Release your SSN only when absolutely necessary, because it's the key to your credit and banking accounts. Don't have your SSN printed on your checks. If your state uses your SSN as your driver's license number (like Virginia), apply to have it (license number) changed."

However, people shouldn't stop writing their SSN on checks made payable to the base exchange, where it's an authorized requirement, Chenault said. People should be most cautious when dealing with off-base agencies.

"The best way people can protect themselves is to make sure they know exactly why a requester needs their SSN," Chenault said. "If a requester can't give a valid reason for the request, people shouldn't give them the number."

His speech to about 240 British government and industry leaders dismissed allegations published in international newspapers that America is surrendering its global leadership and is incapable of honoring its international commitments.

The most dangerous of this recent skepticism implies America's will is flagging, Cohen said.

"From Asia to Africa, from the Middle East to Europe, press, pundits and politicians are asking: 'Will America stay the course?'" he said, recalling the question Winston Churchill posed during World War II. "Some cite recent congressional votes as a withdrawal from international obligations. Others point to 'would-be American leaders' who lure the disenchanted with the 'siren song of isolationism.'"

Three misperceptions are at the heart of these doubts about America's staying power, according to Cohen. First is that the United States has "Superpower Fatigue" caused by a half century of global leadership. Second is that the United States will respond as "reactive soldiers" rather than as a "proactive statesman." Third is that the United States will act alone rather than in partnership with allies and friends.

Cohen labeled the misperceptions disturbing and dangerous because they're false and because they embolden "those eager to exploit any American ambivalence, real or imagined."

America's security strategy is based on shaping a safer world by promoting peace, responding to crises threatening common interests and preparing for an uncertain future, he stressed. Forward-deployed U.S. forces — 100,000 each in Europe and Asia, and another 23,000 in the Persian Gulf — are evidence of America's intent to promote security and stability.

"All of these efforts not only deter foes, they deepen friendships that increase trust, confidence and stability, which in turn decrease tension, conflict and instability," Cohen said.

The secretary reaffirmed America's resolve to play a leading role in combating the threat of chemical and biological warfare and other weapons of mass destruction.

"We shape the world by stemming the seepage of nuclear, chemical and biological weapons into the global arms bazaar," Cohen stressed. "Notwithstanding the recent Senate vote on the (Comprehensive) Test Ban Treaty, we have no intention of resuming tests of nuclear weapons."

"We will act alone when we must, but we will act with others whenever possible," Cohen said. The idea that the United States seeks to "go it alone" ignores a fundamental tenet of America's security strategy, he noted.

Cohen called on Great Britain and other European allies to devote resources to building an even stronger NATO, capable of meeting the new challenges of the 21st century. Relations with Russia and China are also on the forefront of America's security agenda.

America's fate and fortune are linked to its world allies and friends, Cohen continued. "After a century of struggle and sacrifice, Americans know that geography cannot be our security, that there can be no 'splendid isolation of years gone by.'"

"America will stay the course because that is our history," he concluded. "America will stay the course because that is our destiny."

17 MSS shuts out CE in championship and continues to ... Charge on

The 17th Mission Support Squadron shut out the 17th Civil Engineer Squadron 24-0 with their smothering defense and lightning-quick offense during the intramural American League football championship Nov. 24.

"We should be able to take these guys, but when we play them, they tear up our defense," said CE coach Dave Miller during halftime. "I think we're about to fix that problem."

Unfortunately for CE, that problem was never fixed and the MSS tore up their defense and offense throughout the game. The MSS wasted no time as the team's Eric Brown intercepted CE's first pass attempt.

Once in possession of the ball, the MSS made it to the end zone in two plays. The team inched its way to the promised land when quarterback Clinton Jones threw a five-yard pass to William Wood. Jones followed up with a bullet to Chuck McKenzie for the touch down.

Glenn Parker, one of the team's player-coaches, intercepted the ball in the middle of CE's second possession and he caught the 40-yard touchdown pass that followed to give the MSS a 12-0 lead. The MSS missed the extra point, but kept the touch downs coming.

Like a live instant replay, the MSS's Parker intercepted another pass, this time in the end zone, and stole CE's chance to score.

The MSS then took the ball on the 20-yard line and Jones threw a 10-yard pass to McKenzie to put them at the 30. He then threw a five-yard pass to McKenzie. The MSS was slowly making it to the end zone. However, on third down, Jones moved about 10 yards back as CE blasted the brick wall that was his offensive line. Subsequently, Jones had his flags torn from him and the MSS was almost back where they'd started.

This didn't phase the MSS. The team decided to go for the gold on fourth down and Jones threw a long bomb to Parker who ran in for the touch down. The team missed the extra point, but were ahead 18-0 at the end of the first half.

In the second half, the MSS's Jones threw another long bomb to Wood for the fourth and final touch down of the game that put the MSS in the lead, 24-0.

The MSS's defense continued to subdue CE's efforts to score. In the final minutes of the game, the MSS's Parker intercepted the ball three times. After the first two interceptions, penalties were called on the MSS's defensive line for bull-rushing and CE remained in possession. Parker's last interception came at the sound of the whistle and the game ended with a shut out.

"The last time we played CE, they scored two points against us because of a safety," said MSS player-coach Rob McLawhorn. "We knew coming out here we were going to take this."

CS beats 312th for National League title

BY AIRMAN 1ST CLASS CLINTON JONES
Public Affairs

The 17th Communication Squadron defeated the 312th Training Squadron 14-6 in the second game of the National League finals Nov. 23 for the league championship.

The CS won the second game thanks to the connection between quarterback Lamount Westbrooks and receiver Jeremy Kalnbach.

"We played our hearts out both games," said 312th player-coach Chris Ross. "We beat them the last two years, so I guess it was time for them to finally beat us."

The 312th made CS sweat by beating them the first game 12-7, but wasn't able to pull out a win in the second game. The second game was played because it was CS's first loss in the double-elimination tournament.

The 312th was able to score twice in the first game, while holding the CS to one score. Ross scored the first touchdown on a 20-yard pass from Ed Soboski. The extra point conversion was no good.

The 312th then scored their final points on an eight-yard pass to their center, Frank Kane, pushing the score to 12-0.

The CS was able to put points on the board when Shelby Parker caught a touchdown pass from Westbrooks. They converted their extra point attempt, bringing the score to 12-7. That was the last time they scored.

With the 312th winning game, a second game had to be played in order to decide the champion.

The second game started off with CS scoring first on a bomb from Westbrooks to Kalnbach. The extra point conversion was good, bringing the score to 7-0. They then proceeded to score again as Westbrooks and Kalnbach hooked up for another touchdown; this time on a screen pass.

The 312th tried get back in the game in the second half when Ross ran in for a touchdown, making the score 14-6, but that was as close as they could get to the CS.

"The 312th showed a lot of heart and took us to the limit in those two games," said CS player-coach James Lewis. "Since we're the champions for the National League, the only thing left to be done is to play the (American League champions) MSS (17th Mission Support Squadron) so we can see who the best on base is."

The MSS and CS will play each other for the base championship Tuesday at 7:15 p.m. at the baseball field next to the base theater.

Base multimedia production center helps presentations have more ...

BY AIRMAN 1ST CLASS VINCENT TUFARIELLO
Public Affairs

Lights, cameras and ... action are a few of the things a person may find at the Goodfellow Multimedia Production Center where movie magic is happening around the clock.

The center's primary function is to produce special training products for the 17th Training Group, but because of the digital technology it uses, it may also have the time and resources to provide professional television products and services to other base agencies.

The center can produce almost any kind of visual product for people as long as it's used in an official capacity. A visual product may also have more impact on people than a briefing or slide show.

"People have been programmed to pay a lot of attention to this little box here," said Staff Sgt. Rodney Moon, NCO in charge of the production center, as he pointed to a television.

The base's center has also won various awards that prove it produces quality products. Recently, the shop earned the Absolute Excellence in Electronic Media Award which is comparable to the Emmy of commercial television, said Ed O'Neill, chief of the multimedia production center. The shop also earned the 1999 Award for Excellence from the International Society for Performance Improvement, which is another coveted award in the multimedia production career field.

"The folks in my shop work their butts off to make a quality product and satisfy their customers," O'Neill said.

"They (the production center) put together a firefighter instructor recruiting video that was a tremendous success," said Master Sgt. John Manera, fire protection training manager at the 312th Training Squadron. "Since we distributed it a little over a year ago, we've recruited 26 instructors who saw the video."

People who are interested in employing the multimedia production center may call the center at 4-5842. People may sit down with the center's staff to review ideas and get an in-depth consultation.

NEW YEAR'S EVE PARTY: The Goodfellow Club holds a New Year's Eve party Dec. 31 at the club. Cost of the event is $19.99 per couple for members and $22.99 for eligible non-members. Tickets are now on sale at the club. For more information, call 4-5327.

BONANZA BINGO: Bonanza Big Bucks Bingo now takes place every day at every register in the Goodfellow Club, Oasis Club and Sgt. Pepperoni's. The game is $1 a card with the winning numbers changing weekly. People may win up to $1,000.

ELDER CARE: The family support center has information available for adults who are supporting elderly people. For more information, call Victoria Shaffer at 4-3893.

FSC ONLINE: The base family support center has gone online with information on its programs and services. People may have information on the center's programs sent directly to their e-mail address. For more information or to sign up for the service, call Victoria Shaffer at 4-3893 or e-mail her at victoria.shaffer@goodfellow.af.mil. People should include their name; rank; unit; whether they are active duty, civilian, retired or a family member; and their e-mail address.

COMMUNITY CENTER TOURNAMENTS: The base community center holds tournaments daily. The schedule is:

- ◆ Monday - Eight ball
- ◆ Tuesday - Ping pong
- ◆ Wednesday - Foosball
- ◆ Thursday - Nine ball
- ◆ Friday - Cut-throat pool
- ◆ Saturday - Customer's choice

Tournament times are Monday through Friday at 7 p.m. and Saturday and Sunday at 2 p.m. Prizes are chosen from the "prize vault" and include T-shirts, mugs, services dollars and free meals at the Thede Bowling Center or the Goodfellow Club. For more information, call 4-3247.

ADOPT-A-SPOT: The City of San Angelo is looking for interested organizations or people to participate in the Adopt-a-Spot program. The program is designed to help improve the way the community looks by maintaining the adopted spots throughout the year. A sign is put up at the location to recognize the people who maintain the area. People interested in the program may call 657-4241.

ORDER A PICNIC: The Goodfellow Club now offers a take-home or take-out service. The order-a-picnic menu includes:

- ◆ Fried, Montreal or barbecue chicken - $37 for a 50-piece which serves 22 adults, $24 for a 30-piece which serves 13 adults and $16 for a 20-piece which serves eight adults
- ◆ Barbecue, basted and smoked pork ribs - $9 for a full rack (3-3.5 pounds) which serves up to seven half-pound servings
- ◆ Side dishes - $1.90 per pound for potato salad, macaroni salad and baked beans. One pound serves four.
- ◆ Cobbler - $10 for peach, cherry or apple which serves 20. The cobbler must be ordered two hours in advance.

Prices include foam plates and plastic utensils. To order or for more information, call Chris Stansbury at 4-5327.

FSC PROGRAM INFORMATION: The family support center now has a public information folder on the base e-mail network. The folder has detailed information on a variety of the center's programs. People have to go to their e-mail and click on public folders, then scroll down to the family support center folder and click on it.

AT THE MOVIES

Movies start at 7 p.m. in the base theater unless otherwise noted.

Admission is $1.50 for adults and $1 for children.

Three To Tango

Today

Matthew Perry and Neve Campbell star in this film rated PG-13. Oscar is a young architect on the rise and might have found the woman of his dreams. But his dream is short-lived when he discovers that she believes he's gay, though he's heterosexual.

Three Kings

Blue Streak

Sunday

Martin Lawrence and Luke Wilson star in this film rated PG-13. The only thing Miles Logan, a jewel thief, wants to do is get his diamond back and disappear. When he poses as a policeman to retrieve his loot, he gets the reputation of being one of the boldest cops to ever flash a badge. If he isn't careful, he may get what he deserves - a promotion.

Random Hearts

Thursday

Harrison Ford and Kristin Scott Thomas star in this R-rated film. When an airplane carrying Dutch's wife and Kay's husband crashes, leaving no survivors, it marks the beginning of a mystery. Dutch and Kay find out shocking information about their spouses, but are brought together in an unlikely romance.
